As part of our ongoing efforts to preserve George Washington's estate, we must remedy some critical issues inside the Mansion in the safest and most efficient way possible. This will require us to close the Mansion to all visitors from approximately January 23-February 5.

On the date of your visit, you will not be able to tour inside the Mansion. However, the rest of the estate (including the tomb, the outbuildings, the blacksmith shop), will remain open. The Mansion's West Front will be available for photographs. Your party may also explore our new exhibition, Lives Bound Together: Slavery at George Washington's Mount Vernon, in the museum, along with the other featured films and exhibitions in the education center.

We recommend that you plan to spend a minimum of 2–3 hours touring the estate.
